

Fortinet Appoints Chief Financial Officer

Ken Goldman brings solid track record of financial, operational and business expertise

Fortinet, the pioneer and leading provider of unified threat management (UTM) solutions, has announced that Ken Goldman, a seasoned and respected financial industry veteran, has joined the company as Chief Financial Officer (CFO).

Ken Goldman is Fortinet's new CFO

Mr. Goldman is an accomplished executive with extensive financial, operational and business management experience and has a solid track record of success.

"Ken Goldman has earned his reputation as one of the industry's most respected financial executives. With numerous career choices available, his decision to join Fortinet is a testament to our accomplishments and potential as a company," said Ken Xie, founder, president and CEO of Fortinet.

"Ken's vast experience will greatly benefit Fortinet as we move forward. We are pleased to have him on board and look forward to his contributions to the company."

He served as senior vice president, finance and administration, and CFO of Siebel Systems from August 2000 until the close of Oracle Corporation's acquisition in January 2006. Prior to that, he held CFO positions at Excite@Home, Sybase, Inc., Cypress Semiconductor and VLSI Technology.

Additionally, his experience includes board director, audit committee chairman, and financial advisory roles at several leading public and private technology companies.
